A mummiform shabti wearing a plain tripartite wig with a sashed headband that is tied at the back with a large loop and long ties. The arms are crossed right over left above the waist and the hands hold a pair of hoes that are modelled in raised relief and painted black. A rectangular-shaped basket is painted on the back with square-hatched detail. Carrying straps extend from the upper outer corners of the basket over the shoulders but not as far as the hands. When viewed in profile the shabti is very thick in overall dimensions and has a sharply pronounced posterior and the rear lappet of the wig protrudes. A vertical column of inscription is painted on the front of the shabti with framing lines and the owner is named as Ankh-ef-en-Djehuty (He lives for Djehuty).<sup>1</sup> The number 306 is painted in white on the back of the feet and is presumed to be an old collection number.

Shabtis for Ankh-ef-en-Djehuty were excavated in February 1926 by Abou Seif at Tehneh el-Gebel,<sup>2</sup> site of ancient Akoris in Middle Egypt. It is dominated by a massive outcrop of rock into which are cut chapels and tombs (see Fig. 1). There are the ruins of three Graeco-Roman temples at the site.<sup>3</sup>

The shabtis were found in the south chamber at the bottom of a shaft in Tomb 2 (see Fig. 2). Fragments of coffins were also found together with four uninscribed canopic jars made of limestone and fragments of papyri.<sup>4</sup> A Japanese Mission excavated the site between 1981–1992 and Tomb 2 was called Chapel C.<sup>5</sup>

In his report, Abou Seif comments that about 400 shabtis were found for Ankh-ef-en-Djehuty. He describes them as being massive and of squat form.<sup>6</sup> Gauthier clarifies the numbers of shabtis somewhat. He says that Seif counted 413 shabtis in total but that 11 of those were for a different owner, namely Amen-

em–Opet.<sup>7</sup> He comments that 36 ‘overseers’ were found for Ankh–ef–en–Djehuty, so this suggests that there were 366 worker shabtis and when combined they made a set of 402 shabtis. Gauthier describes the shabtis in general as having a beautiful light green hue. The shabtis are now to be found in Cairo (JE 50009–50026 – for one, see Fig. 3).<sup>8</sup> In addition to the present example, another is to be found in Leiden (RMO F 1947/2.7)<sup>9</sup> and a further example was sold at auction (see Fig. 3).<sup>10</sup>

It should be noted that shabtis for another owner called Ankh–ef–en–Djehuty were found in the north chamber but most (?) of these give no title with the exception of some that give the title of 2nd (?) God’s Servant of Amen being written after the owner’s name. This group comprised 134 worker shabtis and six ‘overseers.’ These are now in Cairo (JE 49997–50008).<sup>11</sup>

Shabtis for other owners were also excavated by Abou Seif in the subterranean burial chambers. These were for the God’s Father of Amen, Amen–em–Opet (from Tomb 2 – south chamber – 11 shabtis), the Second God’s Servant of Amen–Re, Pa–shery–(en)–Iset (from Tomb 2 – north chamber – 403 worker shabtis and 38 ‘overseers’) and the God’s Servant of Amen, Overseer of the City and Vizier, Ankh–wen–nefer (from Tomb 3 – 380 shabtis).<sup>12</sup>

Shabtis for Pa–shery–en–Iset are to be found in Cairo (JE 49973–49651) and Vienna (ÄS 9351).<sup>13</sup> Two more examples, an ‘overseer’ and a worker shabti, are to be found in the Aubert Collection.<sup>14</sup> Another worker shabti is in the Rolf Wegmüller

Collection in Zurich. This is a particularly fine faience shabti that has an olive green glaze like the rest of the group.<sup>15</sup> Further examples have been sold at auctions.<sup>16</sup> A set of limestone canopic jars with wooden lids were also found for Pa-shery-en-Iset (Cairo T. 1/10/27/5).<sup>17</sup>

Shabtis for Ankh-wen-nefer are to be found in Cairo (JE 49639–49651), London (BM EA 74882 – read as Ankhiu – donated by Annie Trotter in 1996)<sup>18</sup> and Swansea (EC W660 – ex Sir Henry Solomon Wellcome Collection (1853–1936) acquired at auction in 1935 – see Fig. 4).<sup>19</sup>

Shabtis for Amen-em-opet are to be found in Cairo (JE 50027–50032).<sup>20</sup>

As a final comment, Gauthier writes that shabtis for the various owners noted above were sold or reserved by the Cairo Museum for other museums to acquire.<sup>21</sup> The present author cannot recall seeing any of these particular shabtis on display in the Cairo Museum.
